

Post Colonial DREAMS Pt.1

The post-colonial machine is constructed with community detritus of the remote northern Quebec landscape. Nomadic by design, it roams from community to community picking up debris, reconstructing it, and re-creating new architectures from the collected components. By re-building from the discarded and pre-existing materials strewn about, the machine completes the original purpose of the homes and buildings in their respective communities.

