

PIXELCITY

In today's society, the understanding of one's own identity becomes blurred as technology progresses. Electronic media is the new mean of communication with internet as the virtual space to express a claim and manifest our demands.

Pixelcity is the climax of one's individual expression. Pixelcity is the virtual world taking over architecture to express one's emotions, express one's belonging or take sides in a debate. Here, the window, as an essential part of architectural construction, is used as a communication medium. New smart glass technologies (with silver halide) are used to construct windows, so that windows are turned into screens : a way to communicate with the physical world. Walking down the streets, you can take the immediate pulse about ongoing events; an everyday silent manifestation.
