INVENTOR ALLARD IN TOWN WITH TEMPERED SPECIMENS.

Something About the Man Who Re-discovered the Lost Art of Tempering a Steel Metal, and What Invention May do for the World.

Ferdinand Allard, blacksmith of Quebec, the Canadian who recently discovered the long lost secret of tempering steel in the city on business, came here yesterday for a discovery. Yesterday afternoon he was seen by The Journal and the copper articles tempered by him. Perhaps the most famous small cannon about the world, tested by Col. Montgomerie, was tempered by him.
